Shannon D. Martells

RALEIGH, NC

Shannon Martells' practice focuses on litigation, representing commercial defendants, insured corporations and individual clients in a variety of civil matters. Drawing on her background in personal injury litigation, Shannon brings a practical and client-focused approach to dispute resolution. She is committed to providing clear, solution-oriented communication to ensure clients are well informed and confident in their decision-making throughout the litigation process.

Prior to joining the firm, Shannon practiced personal injury law with a focus on motor vehicle collision cases. Before entering private practice, she gained experience through judicial clerkships in both North Carolina and New York, as well as positions with a juvenile justice clinic and a family law practice. Her background provides her with a well-rounded perspective on litigation and client advocacy.

Outside of work, Shannon is a barre instructor and enjoys exploring new restaurants, spending time with friends and family and being with her dog, Cooper.
